

Monster-level recent

I've always kept growth in mind, incorporating various daily habits and practices.

Recently, the results of continuing this growth-focused daily routine are becoming clearly visible.

- ① Improvement in piano, saxophone, and violin skills
- ② Enhancement of website content... Most of the content is displayed by loading edited Java and other code into HTML.
- ③ Improvement in the quality of artwork and cover art.

Previously, I was able to complete one piece per day, but now even copying and pasting the 1st to 4th versions takes quite a bit of time.

By the way:

- * Search engines like Google
- * Videos like YouTube

- * What words do people typically use to search for things?

- * What kinds of videos do people typically watch?

The display differs depending on the account you log in with.

If you log in without an account on search engines like Google, the display will be unaffected by your usual biases.

This issue's cover is... an arrangement based on "Demon Slayer," the only manga I like, and will be posted in a way that does not infringe on copyright.

It's a manga set in the Taisho era (15 years).

In this Japanese era...

- * The term "Taisho Democracy" (including the Rice Riots and the Public Security Preservation Law)

- * Taisho Romance (including fashion, Western bricks, and modern beauty paintings)